

November 6, 2016

Dear AMLI members,

It is already November, and the Pittsburgh AMLI meeting seems far away! By general consensus, this meeting was one of the greatest (and for that I have to thank once again the Scientific Affairs Committee).

You know by now that in 2017 the next AMLI meeting will be in Denver, Colorado from August 13 – 16. Make a note of these dates in your calendar and plan to come. You can present your work, find old colleagues and make new ones; our annual meeting is a great networking event. The Scientific Affairs Committee is already working on the sessions of this meeting. Some details can be found in our website; and more details will be coming soon. We want this meeting to be as great as the Pittsburgh meeting!

But for the success of any meeting your participation is essential. AMLI is a relatively small scientific organization, but it has members that have a big role in laboratory medicine. There is nothing that can stop this association to be bigger! It has the right people and the right message. We can set the limit! So, come to the meeting, show your work and your dedication to immunology; engage in AMLI's activities (there are committees that you can serve if you want); share your thoughts with your colleagues. Your participation is greatly valued and appreciated.

If you have any suggestions or comments, ideas that you want to share, you can contact me at evandoc16@gmail.com or at 847-219-5068 (mobile phone).

Wish you the best for the approaching holiday season!

Best regards,

Evan Ntrivalas, MD, PhD, HCLD/CC(ABB), D(ABMLI)
