Dear AMLI members,

In a little bit more than 2 months, we will say “Hello Coloradoans” (or “Coloradans”). The 30th Annual AMLI meeting will be held in Denver, CO, August 13-16, 2017. The Scientific Program is on the website, and I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the Scientific Affairs Committee for putting together this excellent program.

The Annual Meeting has been a major opportunity for people who love immunology to meet, present their work, find old colleagues and make new ones.

This year AMLI celebrates its 30th anniversary. Join me to congratulate the founding members of AMLI! They envisioned an association that will have a big role in clinical and laboratory immunology, and I am sure that their vision came to fruition. Thirty years later AMLI is an association dedicated to immunology; has members with scientific expertise in immunology, and its annual meeting is a venue presenting cutting edge in science and education on immunology topics.

So, spread the word among your colleagues about the AMLI and its annual meeting and come to the meeting in Denver; engage in AMLI’s activities (there are committees that you can serve); build the future of immunology for the next 30 years to come. We can learn from the past and shape the future.

Wish you the best for the summer and see you in Denver in August!

Best regards,

Evan Ntrivalas, MD, PhD, HCLD/CC(ABB), D(ABMLI)

AMLI President
